To One Unknown

I have seen the proudest stars
  That wander on through space,
Even the sun and moon,
  But not your face.

I have heard the violin,
  The winds and waves rejoice
In endless minstrelsy,
  Yet not your voice.

I have touched the trillium,
  Pale flower of the land,
Coral anemone,
  And not your hand.

I have kissed the shining feet
  Of Twilight, lover-wise,
Opened the gates of Dawn:
  Oh, not your eyes!
